

Victorian Catholic Education Authority appoints new directors

The Victorian Catholic Education Authority (VCEA), the peak body for Catholic school education in Victoria, has appointed two new directors to its board.

VCEA's Company members appointed Patricia Cowling and Marcelle Mogg as directors, joining VCEA Chair James Merlino and current directors Lynn Glover and Damian Murphy on the board.

"I congratulate Patricia and Marcelle on their appointments and look forward to working with them to advance the mission of Catholic school education in the state," Mr Merlino said.

Ms Cowling has more than 30 years' experience in Catholic education including 20 years as a principal. She has worked across multiple educational settings and brings deep experience and skills in educational consulting and governance having most recently served on the board of Catholic Education Sandhurst Ltd, including three years as chair.

Ms Mogg has more than 30 years' experience in the health and community services sector including as CEO for Catholic Social Services Australia and Group Director Mission Integration at St John of God Health Care. She is currently CEO at Mental Health Victoria. Ms Mogg brings extensive experience as a non-executive-director and currently sits on the boards of Sacred Heart Mission Incorporated and Mercy Community Services Australia Limited.

The Catholic school sector in Victoria educates 213,000 students and has 28,000 teachers and staff across its 496 school communities.
